ABOUT THE PRIZE

Distinguished Canadian architect Raymond Moriyama CC FRAIC RCA, in collaboration with the Royal Architectural Institute of Canada (RAIC) and the RAIC Foundation, created the Moriyama RAIC International Prize in 2013 to raise the international stature of architecture in Canada. His vision for the prize is based on his conviction that great architecture transforms society by promoting humanistic values of social equity, respect, and inclusiveness, and by creating environments for the well-being of all people.

The Moriyama RAIC International Prize is awarded every two years. It consists of a monetary award of CAD $100,000 and a sculpture designed by Canadian designer Wei Yew.

The competition is open to all architects irrespective of nationality and location. Any architect, team of architects, or architect-led collaboration is invited to submit a building or a related group of buildings that has been completed and in use for the intended purpose for at least two years prior before the entry deadline.

There are no prescriptions concerning the scale of the work, the building program, or the cost of construction. Candidates are limited to a single submission per award cycle.

The jury will consider a number of criteria in the evaluation of submissions, including:

- The building's formal and experiential qualities;
- The efficiency and effectiveness of the building in use;
- Response to site, climate and environmental conditions;
- Quality of engagement with the broader context — social, cultural, historical, and political;
- Craftsmanship;
- Timelessness.
